Controversy Grows in Britain Over Channel Ship Collisions

By John M. Lee

LONDON, Jan. 13 (NYT)—Controversy developed today over the safety of shipping in the crowded English Channel after two fatal collisions in two days.

Monday, a 20,545-ton oil tanker, the Texaco Caribbean, collided with a smaller ship off Folkestone, exploded, broke up and sank with the loss of nine lives.

Yesterday, the 2,895-ton West German freighter Braudenburg hit the submerged bow of the Texaco Caribbean and sank within two minutes. Another 21 persons were lost, including four women.

The British government ordered an inquiry into the disasters and said it hoped to make proposals in March to an international agency, the Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization, on changes in Channel rules to avert collisions.

However, Anthony Grant, Under Secretary of Trade and Industry, reiterated in the House of Commons the government's earlier rejection of proposals for a simple revision of present shipping lanes.

Since 1977, Channel shipping has been urged under a voluntary international agreement to keep to the right. This means that north-bound ships, sailing from the English Channel to the North Sea, should keep closer to the French coast and south-bound ships keep closer to the English coast.

However, Trinity House, Britain's chief pilotage and lighthouse authority, has argued that this plan has failed to reduce collisions (which average one a month) and has urged that the lanes be reversed.

One danger, according to the outage authority, is that shipping bound for the port of London must turn left from the coast of France across the path of shipping entering the Channel from North Sea ports at Rotterdam and Antwerp. There is also considerable cross-Channel shipping.

Moreover, the obligation of shipping to yield to the vessel on the starboard, or right side, means that large ships are forced into dangerous maneuvers in shallower water by cross-Channel ferries. Trinity House said, Navigation is complicated by four long sandbanks beneath the Channel parallel to the coastlines.

More Favorable Depths
Reversing lanes would enable ships to take advantage of more favorable water depths, Trinity House said. The government rejected the recommendation, arguing that abandoning the right-hand rule would entail additional collision dangers.

However, John Fardoe, a Liberal member of Parliament and a maritime expert, declared, "It is virtually certain that had this recommendation been accepted, these two wrecks would not have taken place."

The English Channel is one of the busiest sea lanes in the world, with vessels increasing in size and number each year. About 750 vessels a day pass through the narrow straits from a width of 100 miles at the southwest tip of England to 21 miles through the Strait of Dover.

Rostropovich Is Said to Face Ban on Concerts in Finland

MOSCOW, Jan. 13 (UPI)—Celloist Mstislav Rostropovich, the friend and defender of Nobel laureate Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn, has been barred by the Soviet government from performing next week in Finland, family sources said today.

The trip to Helsinki and Tampere, Finland, was to be Mr. Rostropovich's first departure from the Soviet Union since he publicly defended Mr. Solzhenitsyn against party-line critics in the Soviet Union.

The 43-year-old musician, regarded as one of the finest cellists in the world, has encountered official difficulties in the past several weeks inside the Soviet Union. Soviet cultural officials sought to bar him from a performance, but other musicians supported him.

Helsinki sponsors of the concert said they were informed today that because of "changed plans" Mr. Rostropovich would not be there.

Family Statement
Family sources contacted in Moscow concerning the report said, "It appears he will not go to Helsinki next week, and it appears that the Ministry of Culture does not wish him to go."

Mr. Rostropovich has given Mr. Solzhenitsyn part of his country house outside Moscow, and the novelist is living there and working on a new novel. It was there that he and a few friends celebrated his Nobel Prize for literature when it was announced Oct. 28.

relieved from their diocesan assignments by the cardinal last March after they had admitted vandalizing draft board records, the spokesman said.

According to the indictment, the group planned to obtain maps and diagrams of underground tunnels in Washington that contain the heating systems for government buildings. "Dynamic charges were to be detonated in approximately five locations" within the tunnels in order to render inoperative the heating systems in government buildings, it said.

This was to take place on Washington's Birthday, which is usually celebrated on Feb. 22. However, it will be observed on Feb. 15 this year, and Justice Department spokesmen said they did not know which date was referred to in the indictment.

On the following day Mr. Kissinger would be kidnapped, the spokesman said. Then a statement would be issued insisting that the conspirators' demands be met in exchange for his safe return, it said.

Tunnels Entered
The indictment says that the preparations for the plot reached the point that on April 1, 1970, Father Philip Berrigan and Father Wenderoth entered underground tunnels in Washington, and that on Sept. 20 Father Wenderoth discussed the tunnel system with an engineer for the General Service Administration. The indictment mentions 23

Soviet Chief Arrives for Cairo Talks

CAIRO, Jan. 13 (Reuters)—Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny arrived here today for an official visit to Egypt, during which he will attend inauguration ceremonies for the Russian-backed Aswan High Dam and have talks with Egyptian leaders. He was met at the airport by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Mr. Podgorny and President Sadat will hold their first session of talks tonight and tomorrow they will fly together to attend the inauguration ceremonies for the Aswan High Dam, as well as a mass rally.

On his arrival, the Soviet leader was given a 21-gun welcoming salute while a large crowd at the airport shouted slogans hailing Arab-Soviet friendship.

Mideast Is Topic

In a brief statement on his arrival, President Podgorny said the visit will give him an opportunity to discuss the issues relating to the Middle East situation in particular. The cease-fire agreement with Israel expires on Feb. 5.

Teh talks will also center on increasing and strengthening of relations between the Soviet Union and Egypt.

President Podgorny is the first Soviet leader to visit Egypt since Premier Alexei Kosygin's visit last September to attend the funeral of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

In Moscow to Aid Muskie Visit Harriman Views Chances of Détente

By Anthony Astrachan

MOSCOW, Jan. 13 (UPI)—There is no chance of complete détente between the United States and the Soviet Union, but a real chance of progress in certain areas, U.S. elder statesman Averell Harriman said here today.

"There are certain things on which we can come to agreement with the Soviets if we go about it in an intelligent manner," Mr. Harriman told a press conference at the American Embassy. "It's a question of finding the right way to achieve objectives that both countries want."

On Way to Singapore Conference

HEATH SAYS BRITAIN INTENDS TO STAY IN THE COMMONWEALTH

KUALA LUMPUR, Jan. 13 (Reuters)—Britain intends to remain in the Commonwealth, and there are no means by which it can be removed, Prime Minister Edward Heath said here today.

In a briefing before he flew to Singapore for the Commonwealth Conference, Mr. Heath refused to discuss the question of arms supplies for South Africa.

"We are a member of the Commonwealth and will remain a member," he said confidently. Asked if there could be a Commonwealth without Britain, and whether Britain could be expelled from it, he said, "There are no rules whereby they could decide that."

The arms issue will be raised in Singapore, since Ceylon has introduced a motion for discussion on the Indian Ocean, where Soviet warships are increasingly active, Mr. Heath said.

But he said he saw no reason why this issue should cause a break-up of the conference.

Sequel Over Agenda
In Singapore, meanwhile, a squabble over the priority to be given to the South African arms row was averted by a compromise on the eve of the conference.

At a three-hour meeting, senior delegation officials agreed on a draft agenda to be put to the conference tomorrow.

No official details were disclosed about the order in which subjects will be debated or the time allocated to them.

But African sources appeared confident tonight that the arms question could be raised in the early stages of the conference under a general heading of the world political situation and trends.

It was proposed that the first item on the agenda be the world political situation, including East-West relations, Indochina, South Africa and Rhodesia, the Middle East and disarmament, in that order.

Mr. Heath was asked if he had been influenced in his discussions with Commonwealth leaders by their adverse reactions to the possibility of renewed arms sales to South Africa.

Mr. Heath replied: "They accept that this government has nothing whatever to do with apartheid or with racialism. And they accept that we should trade with South Africa and that we should keep the Simonstown agreement."

"And that we should continue to carry out our obligations to the South African Navy and we should carry on supplying them [South Africa] with spare parts."

"This is the impact they have made on me," he said.

Simonstown Agreement
People have argued, he said, that Britain should maintain the Simonstown agreement, use the base and train with the South African Navy, but not supply South Africa with arms to protect the sea lanes round the Cape, which "we have agreed they should do and everybody else agrees they should do."

"It does not seem to me to be very logical," Mr. Heath said. "It has always seemed to me to be impractical that you must do this—you must get other people to do it for you."

He reiterated that his concern is the increasing might of Soviet naval power, which in the Mediterranean has increased, he said, from five combat vessels, five submarines and ten auxiliaries in 1965 to 30 combat vessels, ten submarines and 25 auxiliaries now.

In the Indian Ocean, where no Russian vessels were in evidence in 1968, four combat vessels, two submarines and eight auxiliaries now patrol, he said.

Oil Nations, Firms Argue

members will welcome further talks, even if the oil companies set a date for next Tuesday, the same day as the opening of general OPEC conference talks.

In London, oil industry sources said their understanding is that the talks merely were adjourned, rather than ended and are expected to be resumed by full negotiating teams, AP reports.

Mr. Amuzegar said the average price paid by oil firms (before adding government taxation and profit) is $2.50 a barrel but that the oil is sold for $12 to $14 a barrel.

The oil companies were represented by Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, British Petroleum and Iranian Oil Participants.

IOP, a consortium of Western companies with a major stake in Iran and the Persian Gulf, is made up of British Petroleum, 40 percent; Royal Dutch Shell, 14 percent; Standard Oil of New Jersey, 7 percent; and others.

Before his appointment as a fellow of the University of Chicago's Adlai Stevenson Institute of International Affairs in 1968, Mr. Ahmad was on the staff of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

Spokesmen for an 11-member group that called itself the East Coast Conspiracy to Save Lives called a news conference in Washington shortly after Mr. Hoover made his charges. They said the Berrigan brothers were not members and that they had no knowledge of such a plot. Among the 11 was Father Wenderoth.

Last night Rep. Anderson issued a statement expressing his approval of the fact that the matter was now "in proper judicial channels."

He said he was confident that, if the Berrigans were innocent, they would be found so and if they were guilty, they will be punished according to the law.

Fathers Wenderoth and McLaughlin and Mr. Scoblick were arraigned this morning in Baltimore, United Press International reported. A federal magistrate there refused a request by Cardinal Shehan that the three men be released in his custody, and all three were remanded to jail. Bail was established in each case at $50,000.

Sister McAlister was remanded to the custody of U. S. marshals after a magistrate in South Orange, N. J., set her bail last night at $50,000.

(It was not known whether Mr. Ahmad had been arraigned.) The specific charges lodged against the six defendants were for conspiring to commit the crimes of maliciously destroying U. S. property by means of explosives; possessing dynamite, plastic explosives and detonating caps that had not been registered under federal law; transporting explosives in interstate commerce for the purpose of destroying property; and interstate kidnapping.

The possible penalties for conviction range from five years imprisonment and a $5,000 fine on the explosives offenses to any number of years up to life imprisonment under the kidnapping count.

Native of Pakistan
CHICAGO, Jan. 13 (UPI)—Eqbal Ahmad is a native of Pakistan and does not hold U.S. citizenship, according to a close friend and fellow political scientist.

The friend, a professor at a Chicago university, who wished to remain anonymous, said that Mr. Ahmad has been associated with the anti-war movement in the United States and called him a man respected by persons of many different political beliefs.

After obtaining the equivalent of a master's degree in political science in his native Pakistan, Mr. Ahmad came to the United States and studied at Occidental College in California. He was awarded a master's degree in political science there and then went on to Princeton University, where he obtained his doctorate.

Before his appointment as a fellow of the University of Chicago's Adlai Stevenson Institute of International Affairs in 1968, Mr. Ahmad was on the staff of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

Defense Cites Army's Oath, Rests Case in My Lai Trial

By Douglas Robinson

FORT McPHERSON, Ga., Jan. 13 (NYT)—The defense rested its case today in the court-martial of Sgt. Charles H. Hutto, who is accused of the assault, with intent to murder, of at least six South Vietnamese civilians in the hamlet of My Lai.

Both sides will offer their closing arguments tomorrow morning and the case is expected to go to the six-member panel of officers that will decide Sgt. Hutto's guilt or innocence.

The last bit of evidence offered by Edward L. Magill of Miami, the chief defense attorney, was a copy of the standard oath given to all enlisted men who enter the Army voluntarily, as Sgt. Hutto did.

The oath includes a phrase sworn to by individual soldiers: that they will "obey the orders of the President of the United States and orders by officers appointed over me according to regulations."

The defense has hammered away at the theme that Sgt. Hutto was obeying the order of a superior officer when he fired his rifle into a group of men, women and children, and that he lacked the capability to know whether the order was legal or illegal.

The military judge, Col. Kenneth A. Howard, told counsel for both sides, in the absence of the jury, that his instructions to the panel would indicate that it was up to them to decide whether the order given the sergeant was "manifestly illegal" or merely illegal.

He indicated that it was open to debate whether Sgt. Hutto knew, either by education or training, that an order was illegal. The attorneys for Sgt. Hutto also contended that Army soldiers are given no Army training that would enable them to recognize an illegal order.

Calley Witness Silent
FORT BENNING, Ga., Jan. 13 (Reuters)—An ex-soldier who once said that Capt. Ernest L. Medina ordered everyone killed in the Vietnam village of My Lai, including women and children, refused to testify today at the court-martial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr. Varnado Simpson, 23, now a student at Jackson (Miss.) State College, said his testimony might incriminate him.

Mr. Simpson was called as a defense witness in an earlier trial, but he refused to testify at My Lai on March 15, 1968, was performed on the direct order of Capt. Medina.

Lt. Calley's chief attorney, George Latimer, asked the trial judge, Col. November.

Troop Withdrawals
SAIGON, Jan. 13 (AP)—With the United States stepping up its troop withdrawal from Vietnam, two more major allies are planning to pull out their forces.

South Korea announced this week that it plans a slow, step-by-step withdrawal of its 50,000 troops. Mr. Park has ordered that 10,000 men in two sections during the next year.

Australia and New Zealand, the other two countries contributing troops, reduced their forces last week.

Nixon Signs Bill Repealing Gulf of Tonkin Resolution

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., Jan. 13 (UPI)—President Nixon signed the bill yesterday repealing the controversial Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, the authority by which President Johnson expanded the war in Vietnam in 1964.

The repeal was agreed upon by House-Senate conferees near the end of the 91st Congress. The Nixon administration supported repeal, on the grounds that the resolution, which authorized the President to take all necessary military action to meet his treaty obligations in Southeast Asia—already rest within the authority of the presidency.

The action, mostly symbolic, reassessed Congress's role in foreign policy and its disenchantment with America's heavy involvement in Indochina.

The President signed 23 bills in all yesterday, while also working on his State of the Union address.

The Tonkin Resolution repeal was contained in the Foreign Military Sales Act, which also urges the President to press negotiations for an armistice agreement with the Soviet Union in the Middle East, called for an immediate review of military aid programs, and prohibited the transport of poison gas from Okinawa to the United States.

U.K. Leaders Voice Concern At Bomb Attack on Minister

British society and will not become part of our national life."

Several weeks ago a small time bomb exploded outside Mr. Carr's ministry near Finsbury Circus in London's West End theater district. Police also disclosed that last August another bomb damaged the front door to the home of Sir John Waldron, London's police commissioner. The incident was hushed up at the time.

Prime Minister Spencer Perceval shot to death in the House of Commons on May 11, 1812, was the last British government minister to be assassinated.

Mr. Carr emerged from the house of brandy in his hand. "It's amazing we were not injured," he said.

Pollution Aide Vows to Move U.S. to 'Sanity'
WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (Reuters)—William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the newly created Environmental Protection Agency, pledged yesterday to help move the United States toward "environmental sanity and responsibility."

In a National Press Club speech he said he would employ every tool he could get his hands on. "I am going to insist, with the authority I have, and with all the powers of persuasion at my command, that all existing laws be applied, controlling pollution be enforced across the board, in every city and town and on every industry in this country, starting right now," Mr. Ruckelshaus said.

Blunt Inaugural Speech

Georgia Governor Vows Era Of Liberality for Negroes

By Kenneth Reich

ATLANTA, Jan. 13.—Lester G. Maddox bowed out as governor of Georgia yesterday and peanut farmer Jimmy Carter ushered in a new, apparently more liberal era by bluntly declaring in his inaugural speech, "The time for racial discrimination is over." Standing on a platform on the steps of the state capitol, the 48-year-old southern Georgia Democrat surprised many in his audience with this passage, unprecedented for a governor in this Deep South state:

"At the end of a long campaign, I believe, I know our people of this state as well as anyone could. Based on this knowledge of Georgians north and south, rural and urban, liberal and conservative, I say to you quite frankly that the time for racial discrimination is over.

"Our people have already made this major and difficult decision, but we cannot underestimate the challenge of hundreds of minor decisions yet to be made. Our inherent human charity and our religious beliefs will be taxed to the limit.

Maddox Thanks God "No poor, rural, weak or black person should ever have to bear the additional burden of being deprived of the opportunity of an education, a job or simple justice," Gov. Carter said.

Moments after Gov. Carter's 12-minute speech was over, Mr. Maddox was sworn in on the same platform as lieutenant governor, an office which he won in the November general election and which in Georgia carries considerably more power than it does in most states.

Maddox, 55, sought this office because Georgia law prohibits a governor from succeeding himself.

In his inaugural speech, the new lieutenant governor said his four-year governorship had been marked by honesty, integrity and progress, adding that God, not himself, should be thanked.

"We've been hard drivers, not sparing the whip," Mr. Maddox told the crowd of several thousand. Then, looking over at his successor, he said he turned over the reins of state government "with the horses at full gallop."

CARGO OF DEATH—A military convoy carrying a 150-ton load of mustard gas from its depot on Okinawa to a ship waiting to transfer the gas to Johnston Island.

U.S. Begins to Move Gas For Shipment From Okinawa

TENGAN, Okinawa, Jan. 13 (Reuters).—The U. S. Army today began dismantling its store of poison gas weapons on Okinawa by safely removing a token initial shipment of mustard gas.

Deifying leftist threats to stop them by force, two convoys carrying 150 tons of mustard gas artillery shells moved through several central Okinawa villages where thousands of residents had been evacuated at their own request because of fear of poisoning.

At the east coast port of Ten-gan, the shells were loaded onto a U. S. Army transport ship, which will sail tomorrow morning for Johnston Island, a tiny U. S.-held territory 750 miles southwest of Hawaii.

By the time Okinawa is returned to Japan next year, some 13,000 tons of chemical weapons, mostly nerve gas, will have been moved to Johnston Island.

Storage Facilities Lacking But military officials said no further gas shipments would be made for several months until special storage facilities had been built on the island.

The weapons have been stored at American bases on Okinawa for the past ten years, but their existence was revealed only last year, when a nerve gas leak scare sent several American soldiers to hospital for precautionary checks.

Following Okinawa and Japanese protests, the gas was ordered to be removed as soon as possible, with Johnston Island being chosen after three American states, Alaska, Oregon and Washington, refused to be the site.

Defense Cites Robot Theory In Tate Case

Prosecution Angle Used in Summation

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13 (UPI).—The last attorney arguing for the defense in the Tate-La Bianca murder trial attempted yesterday to use to his advantage the prosecution's theory that Charles Manson sent out his women as robot killers.

Maxwell Keith wound up the summations for Manson and the three female co-defendants yesterday, and after a prosecution rebuttal, the case was expected to go to the jury late this week.

Mr. Keith told the jury that Deputy District Attorney Vincent T. Bugliosi had described Susan Atkins, Patricia Krenwinkel and Leslie Van Houten as "robots, zombies or automatons."

"If you believe that prosecution theory, then these female defendants... were extensions of Manson as if they were his arms and legs," Mr. Keith said.

"Thinking Man's Crime" "If this is so, then these female defendants just can't be guilty of premeditation to murder. They can't be guilty of conspiracy to murder."

It was the first time since the early days of the trial that a defense attorney had attempted to divide the defendants, Attorney Ira Reiner tried to separate Manson from the girls during the jury selection and was dismissed by Miss Van Houten.

Mr. Keith said murder was a "thinking man's crime" and could not be committed by people with no minds, no alternatives, no opinions.

"It's kind of like a horror show, isn't it? The mad scientist and his assistant, Igor, exchanging ideas. But this isn't science fiction. It's real life. This is Mr. Bugliosi's argument."

Mr. Keith, who was appointed to represent Miss Van Houten after the disappearance of defense attorney Ronald Hughes six weeks ago, said the evidence against his client was so flimsy she should be acquitted of all charges.

The only testimony concerning her participation in the La Bianca murders—the only ones with which she is charged—was the statement of Dianne Lake that Miss Van Houten told her about stabbing someone who was already dead.

Mr. Keith said, "Stabbing someone after death is a crime, but it is not murder."

Aide of Sen. Fong Is Indicted In Alleged Fix for Johnny Dio

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (UPI).—An aide to Sen. Efram Fong, R-Hawaii, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges he conspired to fix a security fraud case involving longtime underworld figure John (Johnny Dio) Dioguardi for payment of $200,000.

Cited in the indictment handed down in U.S. District Court in New York City was Sen. Fong's administrative assistant, Robert T. Carson, 44, of Arlington, Va. Also indicted were two New Yorkers, Edward Adams, 30, and Joseph Bald, 41.

Neither Mr. Fong nor his office had any immediate comment on the development.

One of the four counts against Mr. Carson was that he perjured himself in testifying before the same grand jury which returned the indictments.

Dio, already serving a five-year jail sentence for bankruptcy fraud, was among 16 persons indicted on Nov. 19 on charges of security fraud, conspiracy and extortion.

He has long been recognized as a master of the hierarchy of organized crime and has been cited time and again by Senate racket investigators.

Three other alleged members of underworld crime organizations were named in the grand action brought against Dio.

The conspiracy indictment against Mr. Carson, Mr. Adams and Mr. Bald said that when early efforts of the three were unsuccessful in halting prosecution of the Dio case, Mr. Carson called on Deputy Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst last Nov. 24 and said that if something could be done to stop the prosecution—a $100,000 contribution would be made. It was not spelled out to whom the money would go.

"The offer was immediately and categorically rejected [by Mr. Kleindienst]," the indictment said. The grand jury said that the conspiracy to fix the case began about Sept. 1, 1970, in an attempt to prevent Mr. Bald from being indicted in stock fraud investigations being conducted by the securities and Exchange Commission.

His report to a special House of Representatives subcommittee on the draft was given at closed-door hearings last year. The subcommittee's chairman was Edward Hebert, D-La., who became chairman of the Armed Services Committee on the death last month of Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D., S.C.

Mr. Sessions testified that the number of legal cases for draft violation had increased ten times in the last five years. In 1965, 369 cases were instituted and 256 convictions were obtained. In 1970, he said, 3,873 were instituted, and there were 968 convictions.

In a letter with the transcript of the testimony, Mr. Hebert said the objective of a 1969 law to reform the draft by calling up men through a lottery has not worked as hoped. "The subcommittee's review of the administration and operation of the draft law confirmed its concern that institution of the lottery did not result in any increased equity, nor did the new system substantially alleviate the sense of uncertainty confronting most registrants," the letter said.

Pollution Toll of Fish Up WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (UPI).—Water pollution in the United States killed almost three times more fish in 1969 than in 1968, the Environmental Protection Agency has reported. The comparative tolls: 41 million fish in 45 states in 1969; 15 million in 42 states in 1968.

Hughes Sued In Nevada for $50 Million

By Bill Gang

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Jan. 13 (UPI).—Millionaire industrialist Howard Hughes has been named a party to a $50-million lawsuit filed by his former director of operations in Nevada, and faces the possible loss of the entire sum if he fails to appear in court.

Robert Maheu, who for the last four years has served as spokesman for Mr. Hughes's $300-million Nevada operation, filed a counterclaim against Mr. Hughes and the Hughes Tool Co. after being fired in early December by the tool company's directors.

Mr. Maheu contested the ouster, saying that he could only be fired by Mr. Hughes personally. But District Judge Howard Babcock upheld the company's action.

Mr. Maheu, who claims that his reputation and earning ability have been ruined, now has the authority under Nevada law to have Mr. Hughes summoned personally.

Law on Summons Mr. Hughes, however, is still in the Bahamas and cannot be served personally. But Nevada law allows service of the summons to "a person of proper age and discretion" at his last known place of residence—in this case, the Desert Inn Hotel.

Mr. Hughes, should he fail to appear, could default the entire $50 million.

But while Judge Babcock's order names Mr. Hughes as a party, it does not prevent Hughes Tool Co. officials from filing a counterclaim asking for the addition of Mr. Hughes to the suit. This, however, cannot be asked until after Mr. Hughes has been served with the summons.

Meanwhile, Mr. Maheu has appealed the court's ruling upholding his ouster and Monday asked Judge Babcock to postpone the effectiveness of that order until the appeal is heard.

Judge Babcock took the matter under consideration.

Mr. Maheu has said that, should he lose the appeal, he will demand a jury trial on the ouster issue.

Luther King Aide Wins Democratic Vote in Capital

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (UPI).—The Rev. Walter E. Fauntroy, a former top aide to slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., early today won the Democratic nomination for the District of Columbia's first nonvoting delegate to Congress in 86 years.

With most of the city's polling places reporting, Mr. Fauntroy, 37, had 43 percent of the vote. He will face Republican John A. Nevius, 50, a white attorney unopposed in the Republican party primary, in the March 23 general election.

The 758,000 residents of the nation's capital have not been represented in Congress since the delegate's post was abolished in 1875. They were given the right to vote for President beginning with the 1964 elections.

The Washington mayor and city council are appointed by the President, with only a nonpartisan school board being elected.

N.C. Police Hold Panther Youths After Gunfight

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C., Jan. 13 (UPI).—The police arrested two black youths and confiscated 20 boxes of stolen meat yesterday after riddling the local Black Panther headquarters with bullets.

Police Chief Justus Tucker said 75 to 100 policemen surrounded the two-story building and opened fire with shotguns, rifles and tear gas after they were fired on from an upper story in the building.

The police went to the headquarters, after a truck driver reported finding his truck and its carload of meat in front of the Panther house. It had been stolen a half-hour earlier from outside a grocery.

The police removed a shotgun, two heavy-caliber rifles and ammunition from the house along with the meat. The two arrested were aged 22 and 15.

Bonn Bans Use of DDT

BONN, Jan. 13 (AP).—The use of DDT as a weed killer and pesticide will be banned in West Germany beginning May 16, the Agriculture Ministry announced. Research shows that DDT may cause permanent damage to plants, animals and humans, the ministry said, and fines of up to 10,000 marks ($2,700) may be imposed.

Special Plan to Aid Black Workers

Polaroid Resists Staff Call For Boycott of South Africa

By Robert C. Maynard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 13 (UPI).—Polaroid Corp., the first American company to face an employee-initiated boycott because of sales to South Africa, announced yesterday that it will continue to sell in that country and use some of its profits to try to better the lives of black people there.

"For the time being," the company said, "we will continue our business relationships there... but on a basis which blacks there with whom we talked see as supportive to their hopes and plans for the future."

The company said it would no longer sell its film to the South African government but would stay in the consumer market.

It condemned the system of apartheid under which the South African government uses black people as "labor units" in the country's booming economy.

Film sold by Polaroid is used in South Africa's passbook system, but the company said this amounts to only 10 or 15 percent of all film used in passbooks.

All of South Africa's 13.5 million blacks must carry passbooks at all times or face a fine or imprisonment. They are one of the primary methods by which a government controlled by 3.5 million whites keeps track of the nonwhite majority.

Calling its program to aid the blacks a one-year experiment, the company said its South African distributor will take steps to "improve dramatically the salaries and other benefits to their nonwhite employees." It also said that its other business associates in South Africa "will be obliged to initiate a well-defined program to train nonwhite employees for important jobs within their companies."

Polaroid also announced it will support scholarships for blacks and an exchange program of fellowships for two black students under the U.S.-South Africa leader exchange program.

Not located, Polaroid's black employees in the United States announced immediately their plans for expanding their boycott of Polaroid products which has been in effect since the campaign started three months ago. This will be organized through student, radical and peace groups across the country, according to Ken Williams and Caroline Hunter, organizers of the Polaroid Revolutionary Workers Movement.

Revolutionary Workers said their boycott would continue until Polaroid pulls out of South Africa "as an example" to the nearly 300 other American firms that annually sell goods worth almost $600 million in the country.

Four company representatives, two black and two white, who traveled in South Africa for ten days, said they unanimously recommended against withdrawal, although that was seriously considered.

Ken Anderson, a black Polaroid engineer and a member of the travel group, said that blacks in South Africa and expatriate blacks elsewhere urged Polaroid "not to walk out" of South Africa.

In Washington, the South African Embassy said it would not comment on the Polaroid program until officials had an opportunity to study it. One embassy spokesman said that scholarships for blacks "would be in line" with current policy in the country.

GI Killed in Ethiopia ADDIS ABABA, Jan. 13 (UPI).—A U.S. soldier, Ricardo L. Escandia, was shot and killed Monday near Amara, the Ethiopian Ministry of Information announced today. The man was driving alone at the time, the spokesman said.

A police investigation showed he was robbed. The soldier worked at a U.S. communications base in Amara, in Ethiopia.

Separately, it was reported yesterday that Glenn A. Olds has resigned as U.S. ambassador to the U. Economic and Social Council. Mr. Olds, 49, is an educator and former college president who became a talent scout for President Nixon in the 1968 campaign. He served here for two years.

Nixon Aides Deny Organization of Campaign for '72

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (UPI).—The White House denied yesterday that it was preparing for a re-election campaign by President Nixon in 1972 and Attorney General John N. Mitchell said that he did not intend to be a political tutor.

Ron Ziegler, the White House press secretary, denied a report in The New York Times yesterday (it appeared in today's issue of The International Herald Tribune), that Murray M. Chotiner, a political aide to the President, would soon begin "laying the groundwork" for the 1972 campaign.

Mr. Ziegler told newsmen in San Clemente, Calif., at the western White House that "there have been and are no plans under development for 1972."

White House officials said privately Monday that Mr. Chotiner would leave the White House staff to organize a privately funded campaign group "under the tutelage" of the attorney general.

"My plans are to stay right here in the Department of Justice as long as the President wants me," Mr. Mitchell said in a brief statement. "This is a fulltime job and I wouldn't have time for 'political tutoring' of my friend Murray Chotiner or anyone else, even if I had tutoring credentials."

Moon Dirt Held Able to Destroy Earth Bacteria

HOUSTON, Jan. 13 (AP).—Soil from the moon can be used to create an antiseptic powerful enough to easily kill some of the earth's most troublesome germs, says an American biologist.

Moon dirt from core samples collected by the Apollo astronauts provides some unknown ingredient that is highly toxic to bacteria. Dr. Gerald Taylor reported to the second annual Lunar Science conference yesterday.

He said the antiseptic was created by chance while scientists at the Manned Spacecraft Center here were attempting to revive any organisms living in the moon dust. No lunar organisms were found.

The Problems on Wall Street

Things have been fairly quiet on Wall Street in the last few weeks, but that great bastion of American capitalism is in the process of yielding to the government some of the freedom it has possessed to run its own affairs. The Securities and Exchange Commission has butted into the affairs of the New York Stock Exchange and of individual brokerage houses as never before, attempting to make sure they meet capital requirements, actually have the stock certificates they say they have, and are current in their bookkeeping and accounting procedures. And at least two congressional committees are studying the possibility of full-fledged hearings next spring into conditions on the Street. Not since the 1930s has there been so much concern about and so much trouble in the money markets of the country.

Some of the big men on Wall Street find this development outrageous. If we read the recent reports in the business press correctly, the SEC's efforts to put limits on the ways in which brokers operate, they contend, interfere with the operation of a free-enterprise system and put the nose of government under the tents of business, where it doesn't belong. They have some hopes of smothering further government regulation of the stock markets by persuading President Nixon to appoint a non-regulator to be the new chairman of the SEC and by calming down some of the more outraged members of Congress.

Some other equally big men on Wall Street feel quite differently about what is going on. The president of the New York Stock Exchange, Robert Haack, has been among those who have given substantial support to most of the efforts the SEC has made. Generally speaking, they hold that the idea of letting Wall Street regulate itself hasn't worked as well as it might have and that only government has the muscle to pull the entire securities industry back from the brink of disaster, on which it has walked in the last couple of years.

Some of the horror stories now leaking out about the internal management of the stock exchange and some of the brokerage houses make you wonder how Wall Street has survived so long under its SEC-sanctioned self-regulation. The failure of 11 brokerage houses, including the fifth largest, is only the visible tip of an iceberg of mismanagement and callous disregard for the public interest.

It may well be that the best way to clear the air—and to insure that the needed procedures under which Wall Street handles other people's money are adopted—is for Congress to take a careful look at the entire situation. Although the SEC has broken out of its pattern of the past, when it intervened almost exclusively in fraud matters, the public needs to be in on the backstage negotiations through which Wall Street is set straight. That may be the only way in which public confidence in the entire stock-market system can be restored. And without that confidence, the existing system under which business raises capital could collapse and leave the country in a situation not unlike that in which it found itself in the early 1930s.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

The New Corruption

Vice-President Agnew has been unusually quiet in recent weeks. But he may not merely be resting from his arduous political campaign efforts. If the reports and speculations emanating from Washington are correct, the nation is about to see a "new Agnew."

In place of trips to Asia, where he made bellicose, anti-Communist speeches, the Vice-President is said to be planning a journey in the spring to Europe, where he can talk about foreign trade, the environment and other peaceful, constructive subjects. In place of hard-hitting attacks against "radio-libs," rebellious students, and "the media," the Vice-President is to tour the United States on behalf of federal-state revenue sharing and emerge as the champion of the hard-pressed cities.

The purpose of these new activities would be not primarily to put Mr. Agnew's talents and energies to better use but to remake his image with an eye to the 1972 election. Only if he has a less controversial and more conciliatory reputation, it is thought, can he be an asset to the Republican ticket next year.

Like other projects in the nebulous realm of public relations, this image-making venture may come to nothing. Mr. Agnew may simply rebel, since in his earthy, extemporaneous remarks—as distinguished from his carefully crafted alliterations—he has shown himself to be a man with a mind of his own. But the very fact that he and other public figures can be seriously discussed in these terms reflects something fundamentally wrong with American political practice.

There is a widespread acceptance of the degrading notion that a politician can achieve success by manufacturing and manipulating his own reputation. It is not the reality that counts, it is the image. If a candidate can spend enough money, can hire the right ghostwriters and television advisers, and can control the format of his public appearances, then he can invent a winning public personality for himself.

Linked to this manufacturing of images is the blatantly opportunistic conviction that the same man can have several public personalities and project whichever one suits his needs. Thus, a Vice-President can grind through a fiercely negative campaign stressing themes of fear and anger, and then shift smoothly into a statesmanlike gear and go humming along in an entirely different mode.

Too many are content to comment upon these astonishing changes of emphasis and content as if they were drama critics rating an actor's performance. But what of a politician's integrity, his wholeness as a human being? Men who seek the highest offices where they may exercise life-or-death powers have no right to conduct themselves with anything but the highest seriousness.

Every politician, indeed probably every human being, tries to present himself in the best light. That is not at issue. What is of concern is the growing dependence upon various contrivances, evasions and manipulations which go by the name of image-making. This is a vulgar, cynical and fraudulent attempt to present public men as something other than what they are or to present them in several radically inconsistent guises. It is a new corruption and, like old forms of corruption, it requires exposure and condemnation if self-government is to flourish.

International Opinion

Back in the Cold

In the brutal renewed freezing of relations between the White House and the Kremlin, it is not really the Russian Jews or the Zionists; hooligans denounced by Pravda who are involved. The truth is much more dramatic. The present (and third) ceasefire along the Suez Canal ends Feb. 5. There will not be another. This has been stated by Egyptian President Sadat and by his Foreign Minister, Mahmoud Riad, during visits to London and Paris. This means that if the negotiations are not successful within less than four weeks, everything may explode again. The real tension between the two superpowers results from this situation. Both know that an irresistible phenomenon is bringing them back to the brink of the abyss into which they plunged during the Cuba crisis of 1962. For Nixon, everything now depends on Moscow.

Spying on U.S. Citizens

Army spying on civilian personalities is raising acute anxieties in the United States. Of all the values inherited from the frontier era, there is one to which many Americans remain very much attached: discretion toward one's neighbor, especially toward his past. A man must not be hampered all his life by some juvenile mistake; he must be able to start again from scratch; he must be judged on his present attitude, on his eagerness to work, on his success.

Hence the innate aversion of American legislators to any idea of forming people into regiments, of individual files in which the main features of every citizen's life would be recorded. It is not by pure accident that the United States refuses to institute a national identity card. Yet, respect for the public and private life of U.S. citizens has received severe blows for many years.

In the International Edition

Seventy-Five Years Ago

PARIS—Recent events in the Transvaal have afforded the London press a rich opportunity for cultivating the imaginative descriptive vein—and in no direction with greater effect than in dwelling on the "desperate character" of the fighting at Krugersdorp. The desperate fighting we had been accustomed to could have been summed up thus: Several hundred or thousand "niggers" Maximized or riddled with gunshot; on our side, three wounded, and perhaps one man having sprained his knee; all told.

Fifty Years Ago

LONDON—The extremists in Ireland have broken out with such violence as to create the impression here that they have given up hope of dallying in peace negotiations and have again taken matters into their own hands. Talk is now stilled by the blasts of Sinn Fein guns and bombs. When the negotiations were at their height this character of violence ceased almost entirely, but the new clashes are surely rapidly scouting peace talks.

'Faster—I Think It's Gaining on Us.'

The Middle East Negotiations

By James Reston

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—The first problem in the critical negotiations here for peace in the Middle East is to get rid of the threats and maneuvers that make serious negotiation impossible.

Cairo is threatening to renew the war if there is no understanding by Feb. 5, when the present ceasefire agreement ends. Israel is developing, as fast as it can, the disputed areas of Sharm el-Sheikh, the Golan Heights, Hebron and Jerusalem, which are the subjects of negotiation.

So the talks are starting under the most difficult circumstances. Israel is using time to develop the areas it has conquered—building roads and hotels at Sharm el-Sheikh, transforming Jerusalem at a great rate into a modern Israeli capital, and establishing her power in other disputed areas like Hebron.

Egyptian Threat

Meanwhile, the Sadat government in Cairo is threatening war by Feb. 5 if immensely complicated and dangerous problems are not settled within a few days. So there is a threshold problem, and that is what Ambassador Jarring and other officials here are concentrating on for the moment. They are arguing for time. They are pleading with both sides to give the talks a chance, to withdraw the threats of war after Feb. 5, and to hold up the development of the disputed areas until both sides have an opportunity to analyze and understand the terms of negotiation.

The factual situation in the negotiations so far is not hopeless. Jarring apparently came away from his talks with Premier Golda Meir in Israel feeling that her government was prepared to enter into serious negotiations.

It is difficult to be precise about what she suggested, for the talks obviously and properly are being conducted in the utmost secrecy. But the proceedings also have to be passed on to other governments, and at least the drift of her suggestions is now known to the governments principally concerned in the Middle East crisis.

Mrs. Meir put forward not "specific proposals" but some "points for discussion." She made clear to the UN's Jarring that her government would be prepared to be much more specific after she had the reaction of the other side, but meanwhile, she apparently made two practical points:

Boundaries Primary
Israel wants secure, recognized and agreed boundaries, but to begin with would accept the present frontier between Israel and Lebanon. This interested diplomat at the UN, since most of the guerrilla attacks on Israeli soil since 1967 have come across the Lebanon-Israeli frontier.

Union, Britain and France of any settlement that may be reached in the Middle East.

And here is a puzzle. It is now known that, in the Big Four talks about the Middle East, the United States proposed, and got the agreement of Moscow, London, and Paris on a possible settlement on these lines:

1. Israel should be guaranteed her rights as a recognized sovereign state, her rights of passage through the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Aqaba, but,
2. Israel should withdraw from Sinai.
3. Sharm el-Sheikh should be subject to negotiations between the Israeli and the Arab governments.
4. The Golan Heights should be neutralized and placed under international supervision (the Soviet Union did not accept, agree or oppose this suggestion).

In the process of discussing these points in the Big Four meetings, there was apparently general agreement that the four major powers should be willing to guarantee any settlement, and even that U.S. and U.S.S.R. groups should take part in policing the disputed areas for at least ten years, unless the Security Council of the United Nations agreed unanimously to their withdrawal.

At least, this is the testimony of responsible officials here, but they add that this kind of Big Four guarantee, and especially any peace-keeping force which would put Soviet troops on the Middle East borders (and thus keep their right to be in the area) was not acceptable to the Israeli government.

Nevertheless, whoever is right or wrong about all this, the one clear thing is that it is endlessly complicated, that it needs time, free from Egyptian threats of war in a few days, or from Israeli efforts to develop and control the areas under negotiation.

There is a serious chance here for accommodation. Even Jarring has been impressed by Mrs. Meir's opening proposals. But he is worried about the threats of war after Feb. 5 and by the Israeli rush to develop the territories in dispute. He wants time, and an atmosphere of fair negotiation, and as a representative of the world organization, dealing with a problem of world peace, he is entitled to a decent chance.

An Arab Viewpoint

By Mohammed Hassanein Heikal

CAIRO.—A question I am almost invariably asked by foreign visitors to my office at Al Ahran is: "What is the ultimate Egyptian position for a peaceful settlement of the conflict with Israel?"

The late President Nasser gave the answer tersely and directly when I was with him in Moscow last July for talks with the Soviet leaders. "What do you really want?" Brezhnev asked Nasser during the talks. Nasser replied, explaining his position and that of all Egyptians: "One: I can never relinquish any land to Israel. Two: I can never surrender the rights of the Palestinians."

The Egyptian position on territory has been determined by thousands of years of history. Our borders have always been well-defined. In the Egyptian museum in Cairo, for example, there are love letters from the commander of a Pharaonic garrison in the town of el-Arish, in the far Sinai, and now under Israeli occupation. These letters prove that today's Egyptian borders were established thousands of years ago.

Occupation forces have come and gone in our country—Persians, Greeks, Romans, Turks and British—but our borders were unchanged. For the first time, Egypt is faced with demands for border changes.

Since the 1967 war, the conflict between Egypt and Israel has centered on two basic issues. We, the Egyptians, demand a total withdrawal of the Israeli occupation troops. The Israelis say they need guarantees for their security.

As President Sadat has said, the maximum security that Israel could obtain would be a guarantee by the Big Four. Such a guarantee would reflect the power of the Big Four in world affairs. The permanent membership of the Big Four in the Security Council of the United Nations would give such a guarantee international legality. Beyond that, from a practical point of view, a guarantee by the Big Four would be a step toward peace because they are the major suppliers of armaments in the Middle East combat forces. A Big Four guarantee would be a precedent in regional peace-keeping. No other region has received such a guarantee.

In reality, however, Israel does not need a guarantee for her security. Do not let the Israelis proclaim their military superiority over the Arabs and threaten to wipe out Arab armies? If Israel is so powerful, why does she need guarantees? But more crucial for the long run, guarantees and security cannot be achieved by the use of military force. It is in this that we find the great historical mistake of Israel. Israel is and will remain an island in a sea of Arabs. It is a mistake for Israel to think she can find peace forever against this Arab sea by the force of arms.

The Israelis must understand—the sea of Arabs around them will not remain weak and disorganized forever. The breakthrough of knowledge and technology in the area will lead to new forces and new strength.

A state of peace for Israel cannot be achieved by creating conditions of confidence. Peace must come from the heart, not from guns.

Friends of the Arabs often counsel us that we must learn to acknowledge the existence of Israel. But I say that it is time for the Israel to learn to give counsel to that country: The Arabs have always lived here and will always live here.

Israel fails to take into consideration the potential power of the surrounding Arabs. President de Gaulle, who had a sense of historical perspective, tried to draw attention to Israel's misjudgment of the long-range forces in the Middle East.

I repeat: A state of peace in the Middle East cannot be achieved through Israeli military power. Sometimes we Arabs do harm to our cause by talking about it in an impatient and angry way. Perhaps this frightens people who otherwise would understand or support us. But remember, our land was taken from us by aggression. And that aggression has been backed by the United States, the most powerful country in the world.

Sometimes we become angry and we shout. But whatever our fail-

Inside North Vietnam—II Ready for Visitors

By Michael Maclear

THIS is the second article in a four-part series on North Vietnam by Michael Maclear, a 40-year-old broadcast-journalist. The series, made available by the New York Times, is a report on Mr. Maclear's month-long trip to North Vietnam which began on Dec. 10 on assignment by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. He entered North Vietnam via Moscow. It was his second visit to North Vietnam. The first, in the summer of 1969, lasted five weeks.

HANOI—Troops throng this capital city, crowding its stores and marketplaces and idling in its lanes.

Officially, they are said to be on leave, but Western diplomats in Hanoi describe the presence of thousands of soldiers as unprecedented and all the more surprising in view of recent Washington statements on increased infiltration of South Vietnam.

In the diplomatic community, the speculation is that some of the troops are being assigned to industry and development of the home front.

Here as elsewhere in North Vietnam, a visitor returning after 15 months sees evidence of shift from military to domestic priorities amid preparations for a continuation of war.

The current slogan, bantered on almost every street, exhorts "Vigilance on the Home Front," meaning both in its defense and its development according to a blueprint for an industrial "great leap forward."

U.S. air strikes in November and the troop assault at Son Tay are interpreted in Hanoi not as a reaction to the shooting down of an American reconnaissance aircraft or to the conditions in POW camps but as a defeat to North Vietnam's sudden large-scale reconstruction.

Burst of Activity
After two years of sleepy security, Hanoi reacted in mid-December. Suddenly one morning the city was filled with posters urging "Fight the Enemy Wherever He Comes, and in Whatever Form He Comes." Anti-aircraft guns materialized on rooftops in the city center, and militia units began days of purposeful training in street-to-street combat.

In one frenzied day's work, Hanoi's air-raid shelters, which had long been ignored and unusable, were cleared of refuse and furnished by the so-called "Ho Chi Minh Youth Brigades," who perform emergency labor instead of military service. The countless sidewalk pathways, instant makeshift air-raid shelters with cement floors and lids, were freed of filth and frogs and readied again for human occupancy.

Factory militia groups competed in daily keep-fit races with rifles and camouflage-bobbing on their backs. Previously, militia units in this city of more than one million consisted almost entirely of young women. A newer sight now is the armed young male militia, ex-servicemen being redeployed to vital industries. It is said, after three or more years in the army.

But, apart from the heightened state of alert, it is still difficult to have much feeling of war in Hanoi. There is an effort to improve leisure facilities and material standards to ease the increased workload and the mental strain imposed by reorganization of industry and traditional life patterns.

To commemorate the tenth anniversary of the National Liberation Front last Dec. 20, which also marked ten years of war against the U.S., posters depicting major battles of the decade appeared for only one day. The National Assembly met to observe the occasion, but there were no speeches from the top leaders who attended.

On that day, the circus opened in Reunification Park, but except for the place and the fact that half of the audience consisted of soldiers, there were no reminders of revolution in the program.

In Hanoi the major development is the push to build new suburban housing. According to one official it will take ten years to build new homes for all those who need rehousing in the capital.

In the Truong Dinh district southeast of the city, work is nearing completion on a complex of 70 workers' apartment blocks. Each block is divided into a combination of 20 family-size units and single rooms. A family unit for four people rents for the equivalent of about 50 cents a month.

The walls and roofs of the new buildings are prefabricated on the spot and project manager Le Mang said that work on 10,000 prefabricated units was now under way in the Hanoi area.

Buildings soon begin to at the polytechnic institute, which reopened last December after being shut down since 1966. The North Vietnam minister of vocational education, Ta Quang Bui, accompanied me on a visit to the institute and told of plans to expand it to accommodate 4,000 students. At present only about half that number are to be seen learning technical skills with the aid of Soviet equipment.

Mr. Bui disclosed that technical students and their teachers will no longer be conscripted because, in the words of First Secretary Le Duan of the ruling North Vietnamese Communist party: "The needs of the war are secondary."

"Our main objective is reconstruction and future development," he said in an interview.

There are other examples of the re-emphasis of the home front in Hanoi: the central marketplace, closed for the past five years, has also been reopened. The amount of food available seemed no greater than a year earlier, but increases have been promised.

Bias in Germany

I write in support of Major Washington C. Hill, of the U.S. Army Medical Corps in Frankfurt (Letters). He is all too right in his condemnation and racial prejudice in housing in Germany. These practices affect not only blacks but every foreigner working in this country. One approaches the house agent, the agent tells him that he has rooms available, but for a black or foreigner it is difficult, because the landlords will not rent their rooms to foreigners.

U.S. and Portugal

As an American citizen, a missionary living in Africa, I lament America's Africa policy. On the one hand the United States has voted in the United Nations for self-determination for the Portuguese colonies. Yet at the same time we justify our bases in the Azores.

Gallup Poll Average U.S. Family of Four Feels It Needs $126 Weekly

By George Gallup Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N.J., Jan. 13.—A family of four needs $126 a week to make ends meet, according to the American public's own current estimate of living costs.

This is a record amount—$8 higher than the amount specified last year and $26 higher than the public's estimate four years ago.

The sharpest rise in the amount needed it week has come in the East, where the sum currently specified is $149, up $22 from the figure reported last year.

It costs far less for a family of four to get along each week in the South than it does elsewhere in the nation, as indicated by the responses of Southerners included in the survey.

When this index was first reported, 24 years ago, $30 was the (median) average amount specified nationally. By 1947, ten years later, the figure had risen to $43.

5 Poles Given Jail Terms in Hijack Plot Maximum Sentence Imposed Is 3 Years

By George Gallup Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

WARSAW, Jan. 13 (AP)—Five young Poles were given jail terms today, the longest being three years, for conspiring to hijack a domestic airliner to Western Europe.

A Warsaw court judge told them: "You cannot commit such crimes with impunity. Society abhors these crimes and the community must be assured the safety of its flights."

A defense lawyer said that the five, who pleaded guilty, would appeal their sentences. Those jailed were: Krystof Pietrasak, an 18-year-old student who was accused of being the ringleader of the plot.

THEATER IN ITALY

The Author-Actor of Naples

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

ROME, Jan. 13.—It has often been said that the Italian theater suffers a want of unity due to language barriers...

This disapproving comment, officially voiced 40 years ago by Mussolini (who tried being a dramatist himself)...

His new play, "Il Monumento" (which has just arrived at Rome's Teatro Eliseo) differs in certain aspects from the general body of his work...

According to the remorseless calendar, De Filippo is now 70, but as he sits at his dressing-room table, greeting guests during the intermission, he seems a much younger man...

He relates his career with modesty. He formed his acting company in Naples in 1932 when he began to write plays.

Coco Chanel's Funeral Mass

By Hebe Dorsey

PARIS, Jan. 13.—Today, Marlene Dietrich sang up the Chanel fashion house from Los Angeles...

But the biggest tributes to the fashion queen came from the street. A half hour before the service began at 9:30 a.m. people started trooping up the stairs of the white, neo-classical, pillared church...

Other Designers

Every fashion house, even those who had squabbles with the sometimes acid couturier, sent representatives. Pierre Cardin whose gowns with Miss Chanel were famous didn't show up...

Guy Laroche, Michel Goma, Paco Rabanne and Jean-Louis Scherrer.

Eight mannequins, all in Chanel coats, had their hair pulled back with a black bow in the typical, sober, distinguished, lady-like hairdo Miss Chanel loved.

Dior Funeral

Actually, except for Baronne Guy de Rothschild, who came with Jacques Chazot and Alexandre Baron and Baronne Van Zuylen, Mrs. Marcel Achard and Georges Cravenne, the Tout-Paris didn't really show up.

The most touching lot in the church were Miss Chanel's seamstresses, huddled at the back. This they were not in their nondescript coats...

Her seat officially announced that the house (the said financial control long ago) will go on. "We have so much background here," director Jacques Citroen said, "that I think we can go on."

ARCHAEOLOGY

Athens to Show 3,500-Year-Old Frescoes

ATHENS, Jan. 13 (NYT).—Three frescoes of delicate workmanship painted by unknown artists who lived 3,500 years ago will be the highlight of an archaeological exhibition in Athens next spring.

The colorful wall paintings were found in an ancient city discovered under a thick layer of volcanic ash on the southern tip of the Aegean island of Thera. Thera was destroyed by a volcanic eruption about 1530 B.C.

One of the paintings, covering an area of 140 square feet, is the largest unbroken fresco of that period ever found in Greece.

The paintings were moved to the laboratory of the Athens Byzantine Museum, where experts are treating them with modern preservation techniques and piecing them together.

Prof. Spyridon Marinatos, who has directed the four-year excavations, said he hoped the experts would complete their work within a few months so the paintings could be exhibited.

The best-preserved fresco shows what the professor calls "the great festival of the regeneration of nature—the arrival of spring." Covering three walls of a small sanctuary, the painting represents a field of red madonna lilies growing in clusters out of red, blue, green, and purple rocks.

Detail from fresco shows two birds flying about.

"The first swallows have arrived," he said. "They are flying about with joy, flirting with each other in the air. The wedding of the gods of fertility is taking place."

Another fresco that has been almost completely assembled shows a pack of blue monkeys, climbing gracefully over red lava rocks as they flee after ravaging a garden.

"This fresco was painted with such natural detail," Prof. Marinatos said, "that I now have no doubt that monkeys still existed on Thera at the time, just as they survive in

One of hundreds of vases discovered at Thera site.

Cibraltar today at the other end of the Mediterranean."

The third fresco, known as the Fresco of the Princes, shows so far two heads of men with long hair and blue head-dresses, wearing what look like luxurious robes covered with necklaces.

"It is still too early to describe," the professor said, "but the opposite wall of the same room had a painted frieze of deer of exceptional art."

The frescoes are being fixed on frames of aluminum and will be screwed back into place after the Athens exhibition. Other exhibits at the spring display will include some of the 3,000 painted clay pots and bronze utensils found in the excavations.

Ulrica Zsuzsanna, who committed suicide in October, 1970, at the age of 64, spent much of the last eight years of her life in psychiatric clinic. Her work reflects the obsessional, tormented complexity of her conflicts, and to admire them for their esthetic qualities almost amounts to admiring the intriguing patterns of a cancerous growth. This is because her art, or what can be seen of it here, does not express more than her illness.

Hans Bellmer illustrated her book "Sombre Erntestopp" which is presented here along with other documents relative to her life. The whole thing is in fact a documentary exhibition of this tortured soul whose intensity and intelligence aroused the interest of other artists and who found a measure of catharsis in her intricate literary and graphic work.

France Frees Funds to Spur 1971 Growth

$50 Million Also Meant To Cut Unemployment

By Carl Gewirtz

PARIS, Jan. 13.—The French government today unblocked more than 270 million francs ($50 million) of budget funds in a move to bolster the economy and counteract the rising level of unemployment.

Although industrial production rose 1.3 percent in November, the latest month for which figures are available, the key measure of the nation's output remained virtually stagnant throughout most of last year.

Thorn Electrical Profits Up 20 Percent; Acquisition Set

LONDON, Jan. 13 (UPI)—Thorn Electrical Industries Ltd. reports a 20 percent rise in net profits for half year ended Sept. 30, to $7 million ($19 million) from $5 million in the year earlier.

The company will pay an unneeded interim dividend of 9 pence. Profit before tax rose 22 percent to $11.1 million from $9 million.

Jules Thorn, chairman, said he expects the financial results for six months ending March 31 to be "a satisfactory improvement," that the most serious problem facing the company continues to be inflation.

The company also announced it has bought Eveready and Vignoles.

Dal Nippon Profit

TOKYO, Jan. 13 (AP-DP)—Net non-consolidated profits of Dal Nippon Printing rose 20 percent to 2.47 billion yen ($4.7 million) in the half-year ended Nov. 30, from 2.01 billion yen a year earlier.

Sales rose 24 percent to $5.83 million yen in the half-year from $4.5 million a year earlier.

AKZO Estimates

ARNHEM, The Netherlands, Jan. 13 (AP-DP)—Senior AKZO NV officials expect the big Dutch chemical company to report a 20 percent drop in net income for 1970 to about 248.6 million guilders ($68 million) from 308.3 million guilders in 1969, it was learned today.

That indicates a 30 percent net drop in the fourth quarter.

Sales are expected to reach 7 billion guilders, up about 10 percent from 1969, but income expectations have been hurt by a sharp drop in prices for man-made textile fibers in the European Economic Community, substantially higher wage costs and added energy costs.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

After South had opened one heart and West had over-called in spades, both sides persevered in their own suits until South reached four hearts. East felt confident in doubling, but the result was a disappointment to him.

West made the pedestrian lead of a spade, and the dummy South led his diamond ace, cashed two spade winners, discarding a diamond and a club, and ruffed a diamond. He ruffed a club, ruffed another diamond and returned to his hand with another club ruff to reach this position:

NORTH (D)
♠ J ♥ K62
♦ 52
♣ Q976542

WEST
♠ Q9742
♥ 1063
♦ QJ43
♣ AK

EAST
♠ 1063
♥ AQ4
♦ K98
♣ J1083

SOUTH
♠ AK85
♥ J10973
♦ A1078

Neither side was vulnerable. The bidding:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1♥ 1♠
2♥ 2♠ 3♥ 3♠
Pass Pass 4♥ Pass
Pass Dbl. Pass Pass

West led the spade four.

South ruffed his last diamond with the heart king in dummy and it did not matter whether or not East over-ruffed. South's remaining trumps brought his trick-total to ten. South therefore scored 590 points for making four hearts doubled. If West had been inspired to lead a trump against four hearts

NOVEMBER

By Georges Simenon. Translated from the French by Jean Stewart, Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich. 185 pp. $5.75.

Reviewed by Michael Kernan

GEORGES SIMENON is one of those artists who seems doomed, by the apparent effortlessness of his work, to be paroled both by his peers (Gide once wrote him in innocent faith, "You are much more important than is commonly supposed," and by critics, who generally content themselves with comfortable amazement that quality could accompany quantity.

"November" is either the 20th or 203rd novel written by Simenon under his own name, as least the 50th if one includes his 19 pseudonyms, the fourth published in America this year, and part of a body of work that in France is known simply as Simenons.

Among these are 75 Maigrets, the detective stories starring Inspector Maigret, a pipe-smoking, micro-stopping psychologist and confessor who falls somewhere between Sherlock Holmes and Father Brown and is better known in Europe than James Bond or, possibly, President Nixon. (Dunhill even has a Coop-Maigret tobacco, a strong seller in Europe—Simenon's own brand—but unavailable in America except in a different cut, as Royal Yacht.)

Probably "November" is as perfect an example of the Simenon "hard" or non-detective novel as any that has been published in this country recently. It has all the signs:

The story concerns a crisis in a life, in this case the lives of a whole family trapped together in a grossly unhappy, hermetic situation.

The denouement, where the daughter declines to exploit her suspicions that her alcoholic mother has murdered the seductive maid, is not so much a turning point as a revelation of something that was there all along.

Writing as always with directness, with an economy that approaches purity and a felicity that approaches elegance, the author seems to have a virtually psychiatric understanding of every character's behavior.

Movies

In New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Among the new films in New York: "A Very Curious Girl" (Ga. Flançois du Pirate), Nelly Kaplan's first feature movie, got a good review from Clive Barnes in "The New York Times." The film concerns Marie (Gerardette Lafont), with whom "the citizens of the bleak little village of Teller have been having their way" ever since she reached puberty. It is "the often amusing, cool, unsentimental story of Marie's revenge," reports Barnes. "The film is as unequivocally moral as a 'Mean Streets' and as much more Gallio than grief-stricken. (It) is effective as an optimistic object lesson. There are multiple rewards to be earned when aimless lust is organized and put on a strictly cash basis."

Good-bye Jones

WASHINGTON—The big question on everybody's mind in 1971 is "what happened to the economy and where did we go wrong?" It's easy to blame the Nixon administration for the economic slowdown but, if the truth be known, Nixon had nothing to do with it.

an electric snow-spray machine on his driveway, came over to say hello. "You ought to get one of these machines, Harry," Jones said. "They're the latest thing."

"I don't need a snow removal machine," Harry muttered. Jones ignored Harry's mood and said, "When are you getting delivery on your new station wagon?"

"I'm not buying a new station wagon, Jones."

"But I bought one," Jones said. "Good for you," Harry said. "But were sticking with last year's car."

"Look, Harry, it's a question of money," Jones said quietly. "I'll sign a note for you at the bank."

"I don't need you to sign a note for me, Jones," Harry said. "I'm up to here with you. You made me buy a color television set, a garbage crusher, an underneath car springing system, a mini-bike for my son, ballerina lessons for my daughter, a trip to Hawaii for my wife, and I had to do over my whole recreation room because you bought a new pool table. I don't care what you do anymore, I'm not going to try and keep up with you."

"Don't yell," pleaded Jones. "The neighbors will hear you."

"I want them to hear me," yelled Harry. "LISTEN, NEIGHBORS, I'M NOT KEEPING UP WITH JONES ANYMORE. HE'S A 14 CARAT PHONY, AND HE'S DRIVING US ALL INTO BANKRUPTCY."

The neighbors dashed out on the street. They could believe their ears. The one had never questioned Jones's status before. "But if we don't keep up with the Joneses, who are we going to keep up with?" a neighbor asked.

"Me," said Harry, "and for starters, I'm not buying a new station wagon. So I've saved everybody on this block $5,000."

It made sense to the people on Maple Street, and they all voted to keep up with the Putnams instead.

And at that moment, the recession in the United States really got under way.

David Lean (right), the director of "Ryan's Daughter," according to Robert Mitchum (left), never considered him "his social, intellectual or artistic peer."

Mitchum: Image of A Bad Guy

PARIS—Robert Mitchum isn't one to boast about his acting, but he will say one thing in his favor: "I work cheap. I'm efficient." He doesn't go in for much heavy talk about his craft.

"You don't grab everyone coming out of the Ford factory and ask them about their involvement in their jobs," he says. "And you don't blame them if the car falls apart."

"There are too many circumstances that cry out for doing. I can't find enough value in being a facemaker and talking about it."

Hitting the road at the age of 14, Robert Mitchum worked at a variety of professions from coal miner to ladies' shoes salesman, boxer, poet and manager of astrologer Carroll Righter. Did any of these jobs seem possible as a way of life?

"No."

Does acting?

"No."

Mr. Mitchum, suffering mightily from jet-lag and a night on the town in Paris to promote his latest film, "Ryan's Daughter," why he cannot recall. He wears a ready-for-anything outfit of a white cotton turtleneck, formal black suit and Gucci-style black loafers. He moves marvelously (if anyone in Hollywood wanted to make a really sexy picture, it should feature Robert Mitchum and Ava Gardner, just walking). A scotch with a water chaser is close at hand.

He hasn't worked since finishing "Ryan's Daughter" a year ago and says he may not work again "unless the family gets bored with me around the house. Women especially feel you must produce. Why be productive? Why not be laisious and follow?"

What gets him to agree to work, Mr. Mitchum says, is "a long line of nasty producers saying if I can get you I can get it financed. It's not really my lick, is it?"

One of his more spectacular turnarounds was "Patton," despite a strenuous 20th Century-Fox campaign which featured photographs of Mitchum's head on a combative general's body. Mitchum disliked the script and had no intention of resting around in towels and dying of malaria in Almeria. "I'll tell you what to do," he told his suitors, "you get George C. Scott."

Robert Mitchum likes to play lazy, perhaps partly to cover shyness about what he considers an overestimated profession. He is a born observer, very quiet and astute, a shrewd mind, "volant" ("I'm not a shrewd mind, I figure prices have gone up"), but a hard man to con. His opinions are right to the point.

On actor-producers: "You get your name painted in white on a chair in lieu of salary."

On "in-depth" interviews: "They're looking for a hot body to keep those Chesterfield ads apart."

On Academy Awards: "I'd never win. It would be like Sonny Liston getting the championship. 'The image is too murky' is a member of the Academy. I do nothing about the Oscars except denounce them, but I wouldn't vote for me for the very precious reason that it's a deviation of purpose—I think it would be far more important for someone to win who needs it, who seeks it."

Robert Mitchum started in Hopalong Cassidy films, and in a Laurel and Hardy picture called "The Dancing Masters" played a gangster who punched a hole through a wall. In recent years, he has been taken very seriously as an actor and the apothosis will occur shortly with a life cover story ("I was my secretary's doing, she thinks I should be cast in bromers"). Mr. Mitchum refers to the life story as "my suicide note" and predicts the magazine will fold directly it appears.

"Sometimes I see an old film of mine on television," Mr. Mitchum says, "and it's not too bad, not too embarrassing. But I don't think it's a triumph, a full course meal of satisfaction. It's cheap."

"I'm no better than I was in the very beginning. I'm probably more careless and that carelessness is interpreted as grace. Before, when it was necessary to be impressive, I was too shy."

Another reason for Robert Mitchum's current popularity is probably his tough-guy image, the man whose musty trousers started when he was a small kid. "I was going to the North Pole or something. I was picked up in the men's room of the railway station at New Haven and sent to a juvenile detention home."

He may be tough, he is certainly an individual, but he is not irresponsible. "It's at the beginning of responsibility, maturity is the acceptance of responsibility," he says, characteristically adding, "It's really a question of entrapment."

John Huston is the director Robert Mitchum has been happiest with. David Lean, the impassioned, perfectionist, terribly slow director of "Ryan's Daughter," was the opposite of Mitchum; who is strictly a one-take man.

"David's completely mad, imbued with and dissolved by the impossible dream. I drove him mad. He never considered me his social, intellectual or artistic peer. Those strange little ears—I used to say, don't you point your ears at me, David Lean."

That picture was like house arrest. I just sat and stared at three walls, saving the fourth for madness."

PEOPLE

The guy from Amsterdam signs himself "Peter Pussycat" and who are we to argue? "To help write in 1971 on a proper note of absurdity," writes P.T. "I hereby assume an assumed name."

"I have a note for the lack of a more natural title. I call 'Dear Venetian.'" What Peter appears to have come up with is a sort of etymological dictionary—by definition, one with all the bugs traced in—excerpts from which follow:

"Pervers—How poets are paid. Limpid—A soft unconsciousness. Protein—in favor of youth. Dilute—Live for a long time. Debauch—An levitating society."

"Weight—Best to take your time. Giant—An insect in the U.S. Army. Rocket—What you do to a crying baby. Charming—Search a precious Chinese vase. Constipation—Opposing hair's country. Conflagration—Against appointed appointment of national banners."

"Camille—Will possibly make an impression. 'Black—My turn to give out the cards. Report—Knock wine. Banal—Prohibit fire. 'Marxistics, no doubt,' concludes Mr. Pussycat, "and for that matter, Peter New Year, too."

Reclivist Couple: Grays' heart-rending "Jo!" It seems, has reopened a number of old wounds.

From Colo, Mexican Ambassador Rodolfo Uthig writes: "The Spanish top! depicts anti-felting among them affiliation and pain..." On the other hand, "Iny" expresses acute physical pain, as well as fastidiousness or ridiculous childish astonishment. When repeated in groups of three (Ay, ay, ay; "Iny, Iny, Iny"), "Iny" forms, in some dialects, a yearning or a repeated sigh; the latter, awe, admiration or mockery, according to the occasion. Oh!

From Alan Dean, of Belgrade: "I'd like to add a postscript to your research into cries of pain by reporting that I made investigations at the Grand Hotel in Warsaw in which came in last the recommended procedure, is to stifle

According to Peter S. Allen, of Lakeland, Greece, who cites as his source one Karl Petric: "Near the end of World War II the occupying German troops were forced to withdraw from the island of Crete. Following a modified scorched-earth policy, they contaminated many springs, wells and other sources of the island's drinking water. Once the Germans were gone, however, the Greek government embarked upon a massive program of water purification, a project which became known in time as the Cretans' Clearwater Revival."

A happynewyear of thanks to Frank Deane, of Versailles (who notes that the weekly Pariscope previews the Miss West vehicle "Myra Mackendridge" and warns that "the original version is even worse" for the least reassuring present of Christmas past; a year's supply of the island's drinking water, "and the and-shine Aikins-Wafers."

From Frank Reford, "president of the Lisbon Chapter of Men's Lib": "The World Health Organization is to be commended on its iteration that 'there are no marked differences between the ability structure of men and women. Since nobody else seems to give a damn, I propose a new slogan for that august body: 'WEO Cares.'"
